Liz DePoy: As with any barn, the end result always is out of the end, and there's always poop in the barn. So shoveling poop is what most people do – they take a shovel, and, get under it quickly and scoop it up. I can't do that because I don't have the balance. I also can't bend easily and I can't sweep because of the rotation –the trunk rotation - very uncomfortable for me. So, we went to the hardware store and got the simple dustpan that you might use in your garage or your basement, and its very simple to use, because, rather than me having to rotate – what I do, is I take a regular broom and I just sweep it into this dustpan. And this way I don't have to move at all - and I'm using the strength of my body to pull rather than push. (Music)
